

Rhode Island Continuum of Care
Reallocation Policy

In 2012 HUD allowed Continuums of Care to reallocate funds from renewal projects to provide funding for new projects. A project's funds might be reallocated for a number of reasons:

- The project has alternate funds to pay for activities and the sub-recipient is requesting a lower budget amount in the application.
- The project no longer meets the needs of Rhode Island's homeless.
- The sub-recipient is no longer able to administer the project and a new sub-recipient cannot be identified.
- Multiple years of recaptures show the project to be over resourced.
- The sub-recipient does not meet the minimum thresholds of project eligibility and/or project quality.
- The project is underperforming in meeting outcome goals.
- The project has monitoring finds that have not been resolved.

The Sub-Recipient Approval and Evaluation Committee will review the applications of each project and determine if a reallocation is recommended. If this decision is made, the agency will be informed within 3 days of the committee's decision. Within three days from receiving the decision, the agency may request in writing a meeting to appeal the decision. The letter should be sent to:
